

Homelessness

We live in a world where many people have no jobs and nowhere to live. They choose to live out in the streets where it may be cold or hot. There, many people are homeless due to lack of family support or being abused. These are big issues for America because these people ask for money on street corners, try to clean your windshield for money, and even go into businesses, and ask for money. We need to help these people before this issue gets even bigger.

Homelessness may not be a big issue to some people, but families are out in the streets with their kids begging for money and food. America may have a plan for this, but government people do not actually go out there and help the homeless. The main problem is that we don't have enough shelters. We get frustrated seeing them out in the streets.

When you're walking out of the store, you don't want a stranger asking you for money, but you feel that this person doesn't have a place to live since America abandoned him or her, and there are not enough shelters. This whole issue with homelessness will never be fixed if we just sit here, and wait until the government does something about it. Meanwhile, homeless people are out there in the cold and sometimes, being assaulted.

Daniel Acosta, 8th Grade, RYSS