

Homelessness

Homelessness is a situation you see everywhere, and it is very bad because all you see are people living under the freeways and bridges. They are also at bus stops, and it is very sad to see these people like this. They don't have a place to live. Each year, more than 3 million people experience homelessness including 1.3 million children, and I think we need to help them get a job, and teach them how to spend money on things they really need.

Homelessness is caused by a lot of things. It may be caused by family problems, unemployment, medical money problems, alcoholism, or even a prison record. This has to stop because if it keeps happening, this world will end up with homeless people on every corner. Many homeless people get really happy when they get at least five dollars, but they will feel better when they know they have a job and a home to live in.

I think we should do something about this because there are so many people like this in major cities and especially in their downtown areas. It makes me really angry that people say that downtown isn't supposed to be surrounded by homeless people. When I hear them say this, I just feel like asking them, "If it bothers you, why don't you do something about it." Many people don't really care about this because they have what they need, but if they were in a homeless person's situation, they would want this to come true. I agree with people that want to help the homeless because I know that some day, those people will be really happy when they see that they have money and a home to live in.

I hope that one day the word, homelessness stops existing because it is very sad to see the homeless people looking at other people that have food, money, and a house to live in. If this ever stops, I would be so happy, and they would be happier because they would stop begging for money or food. It would be really nice if someone gave them jobs so they can start earning their own money and start learning how to save it. I wonder if there is a person out in the world that really cares about homeless people?

There is one thing that really bothers me about trying to help the homeless. Sometimes when we give them money, the first thing they do is buy some alcohol or drugs. This is a big reason why people don't want to help them. I think that we should gather people that really care about these homeless people, and try to help them by giving them things they really need, for example food, clothes, and shoes.
