

Homelessness

Homelessness is a serious issue. Homeless people have reasons why they are homeless. Maybe they are on drugs, they got fired, they have no money, or they broke their ties with their family and friends. Some homeless people die of starvation or drugs. We have to stop all of this.

Single adults, families with children and the elderly are some of the people who have no place to call home. There are shelters, but not enough beds since the population of homeless people are increasing every year. The majority of homeless people sleep on the sidewalks or in the parks. They push their belongings around in shopping carts in search of food, drugs, and alcohol.

Homelessness is a part of the poverty issue. I know the United States is great, but the worst part is seeing homeless people in our beautiful country. These people also need to help themselves, like stop taking drugs, stop drinking alcohol, and get a job. There are many places where homeless people sleep such as parking lots, under bridges, and even alleys. They go through a lot of struggles, and I really feel bad for them. What they go through makes me really sad.

This is why you should stay close to your family, because you're going to need them one day in your life. Your family will always be there for you. If you help them, they will help you, and will be there to support you even if it's because of sickness, or financial problems. We need to learn to be grateful for what we have, and take care of it because we still want this in our life. It's also important to have an education. It will lead you in the right direction to succeed in life.
