

Homelessness

It is really sad when I know that over 3.5 million people are homeless in America. And to top it off, a lot of these people are kids under the age of 18.

Why ignore them when they need the attention and money? I know there's a major economic crisis in America, but that doesn't mean you shouldn't give them at least $4 or something to buy a small burger and some water. It really is sad. Some people with their noses stuck up in the air can be so selfish. Doing good deeds will make you feel good.

I can understand that some homeless people do drugs and drink nothing but beer, but some of them really need the money for food and clothes.
