

Homelessness

Being homeless is when people don't have a place to live. They are out in the streets begging for money or for food to eat. Some people run away, and then end up not having a place to stay. Some lose their home, and don't have anywhere to go. Some end up living in their car. They may not have a family or friends to help them, or give them advice.

We can end homelessness by offering training and jobs. We can give them the opportunity they need by teaching them ways to survive in the world. We can teach them the right way to live.
