

Homelessness

Many people in Houston, Texas suffer from homelessness. Each day, more than 9,000 people are in the streets. They have either been kicked out of their houses, or cannot afford to pay the bills. People that are homeless are probably suffering from hunger and bad weather. Many of them are even in danger. This is not fair for the little kids in the streets that have a whole life ahead of them.

No one deserves to be suffering in the streets begging for food, money, or even a house. I feel really bad for the people who live in the streets. I am sure that they would like living life like they are supposed to. Many people who have everything in the palm of their hands do not appreciate the things that they have.

If I could ever win the lottery, I would at least like to buy some houses for the homeless people so they could stop suffering in the streets. Little kids should not be suffering from homelessness. If we helped everyone go to college, there would not be homelessness. Also, we should help people with their drug and drinking problems that can lead to suffering in the streets.

Here are some ways to help the homeless: discuss this problem with your loved ones; help out people that need help, not people who only want money for drugs; feed people that need food; gather with friends to stop homelessness; and be generous to other people like they have been to you.
