

Creating the future we want

If we really want to achieve something for the future, we need to make it happen. The future we want is to make better choices, and be a better person in our life. I would say that it takes many different things to create the future like finishing school, helping others, stopping bad people, and stopping bullying. We need to make better choices so our economy is less expensive, and we have more jobs in the future. We need to start making changes so we can be prepared.

I will create my future by finishing school. If you drop out of school, you are not going to succeed. Finishing school is important because it helps the community be better. Finishing school is really important because we could have a good future for our kids.

Also a good thing for creating the future we want is by helping others. Helping others might be the correct thing to do because you are being a nice person to others. If you help others, they might help you with something you really need. Helping others for our future is really nice to do because if you help poor people by giving them money, they will be thankful to you. You never know, one day, you might be like them in the future. Also give them a job so they can earn money.

For the future, we want to stop the bullying. We don't want more people affected by people who are so mean. We want the violence to stop because so many people have been killed. We don't want enemies. Creating the future we want is stopping the violence, and putting bad people in jail. We want criminals to pay the consequences for what they have done in this world. Criminals should not be in the future. We want all the violence to stop, and live in a place where everything is calm.

For the future, we want to be prepared. We have to prepare for all the new or bad things that are going to happen. Creating the future that we want is being prepared for bad things like tornadoes or hurricanes. We have to be prepared for the change in the economy. We want a really good future. We want things to change, and we want to have a better life.

Nairyly Nieves, 8th Grade, RYSS