

Creating the future we want

Do you have an idea for your future? I have a lot of ideas for my future. I think a better future is that we have a world with no war. We have peace between people in the world. We have no homeless people on the streets, and no violence. We need to educate people about this.

My idea for a good future is to have peace with other people in the world. I mean that we should have no war. I do not approve of the war that's going on now between the United States and Afghanistan. I don't like what's going on between the two countries. I don't like it because we have people putting their lives in danger. I know this because I had a family member killed in this war when his tank was bombed. My uncle died, two months ago because of Afghanistan trying to get the United States out of the country. I see the future as a world of peace, but I also see the world as a big ball of bombs exploding every day.

In the future, I don't want to see homeless people on the streets. I think people should have an opportunity to have something in their lives. When I see a homeless person on the street asking for money, food, or something, I feel like I should put him in the car with me and my mom, and take him to my house to give him a place to sleep, something to eat.

Another idea is that we need less technology in the world. I know some people might ask, "Why less technology?" Because of technology, people are not getting enough exercise. They say that the Wii game helps you get more exercise, but it really doesn't help you. In the future, I think people should be healthy. I would like to see better health care. I think better health care would be good because more people would not die.

Amanda Villa Toro, 8th Grade, RYSS