

"When I die, put near me something that has loved the light, and had the sky above it always." --Little Nell, The Old Curiosity Shop, by Charles Dickens. He was born in London.

A lot of people really like Charles Dickens books.

London Calling:

Celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Charles Dickens with this new special exhibition at the Museum of London recreating the atmosphere of Victorian London through sound and projections. You'll be taken on a haunting journey to discover the city that inspired his writings. http://bit.ly/zWjeXI

I think this is really cool because they celebrate a great author's birthday.

Charles Dickens is the author of one of my favorite stories, "The Christmas Carol". From all the comments and posts I've seen on Facebook, it seems that Charles Dickens was a fantastic author. It is really amazing how history about Charles Dickens is changing in modern times and on Facebook. People in London still celebrate his birthday in London every year.
