

Gun Violence In Schools ...

Gun violence no matter where it happens is a very traumatic event. But when it happens in our schools to very young children, it is even more shocking! There has to be a way to stop gun violence in schools. Teachers and staff should be more aware of who goes in and who comes out of the school. Even if there are people out there that have mental issues that should not be an excuse. Parents should learn how to control them.

What is gun violence?

Gun violence means someone threatening somebody else, harming the person really bad, and he could end up in the hospital or dead. Gun violence may also be defined as the crime committed using guns. It may or may not include actions for self defense. Even if it was self defense and if that person dies, you could get sent to jail for killing the person with a gun.

What causes gun violence?

What may cause gun violence is the kind of culture they have. The kind of culture like the people from Afghanistan shooting other people at a very young age. Or some people may use the excuse of "my child has mental issues." I don't think that should be an excuse about shooting other innocent people. Some people may be so into guns or violence from watching television or movies that come with gun shooting and killing people. They may think that it is a fun thing to do. Yes it might be a fun thing to do. I play shooting games on TV. But I also understand that you could only do that on the TV, not in real life. I know that I shouldn't do it in real life. I may only use it for self defense if it's necessary. If it isn't, I shouldn't use it at all.

How do we stop gun violence?

There are many ways to stop gun violence. One way is to only sell guns to adults that are 30 years or older. By then people should be more mature and think twice about killing someone else. The way to stop gun violence in schools is to put fences all around the school. That way there should be only one entrance and one exit to go in and come out of the school. Then it'll be safer and the staff could know who went in and who came out in case of any incidents.
